Synopsis

§ 87(2)(b) made her complaint via the CCRB's on-line website on September 29, 2006. She claimed that on September 27, 2006, at approximately 1:09AM, in the vicinity of Guy R. Brewer Boulevard and Baisley Boulevard in Queens, PO Michael Carleo issued her a summons in retaliation for her pointing out that he was on a cellphone in his car. She stated that while they were at a traffic light, she saw PO Carleo on his cellphone and stated, "You need to give yourself a ticket." PO Carleo responded, "What did you say?" The light changed and § 87(2)(b) drove off. PO Carleo followed her to an "Entry Pass" parking lot until she stopped. PO Carleo said, "You drove threw a steady red light and you were not in the turning lane." § 87(2)(b) claimed that she did not commit a violation at all and that he issued the ticket because he was angry that she had made a comment about him being on the phone.

On October 6, 2006, a call was made to the telephone number that § 87(2)(b) provided. § 87(2)(b) did not have an answering service. An email and a letter were also sent to § 87(2)(b) on this date. On October 10, 2006 a second call was made and an email and a letter were sent to § 87(2)(b). This time an answering service took the call and a message was left for § 87(2)(b). Three more calls were made to § 87(2)(b) between October 13 and October 19, 2006. The answering service only responded to one of these calls during which a message was left. The letters and emails sent to § 87(2)(b) were not returned to the agency. § 87(2)(b) has not attempted to contact the CCRB despite these attempts to contact her. It is therefore recommended that this case be closed as complainant unavailable.
