Case Summary

§ 87(2)(b) filed this complaint with the NYPD's Internal Affairs Bureau on January 16th, 2024. It was received by the CCRB on January 25th, 2024.

On January 16th, 2024, Police Officer Ryan Nertney, Police Officer Richard Wittneben, and Police Officer Nicholas Medina of the 113th Precinct stopped § 87(2)(b) vehicle for illegal tints (Allegations A, B, and C: Abuse of Authority – Vehicle Stop, Within NYPD Guidelines). Police Officer Nertney asked § 87(2)(b) and the passenger, § 87(2)(b) to exit the vehicle, at which point Police Officer Medina questioned § 87(2)(b) about weapons before frisking both § 87(2)(b) and § 87(2)(b) (Allegation D: Abuse of Authority – Question, Substantiated) (Allegations E and F: Abuse of Authority – Frisk, Substantiated). Police Officer Medina allegedly saw an open container of alcohol in § 87(2)(b) vehicle and signaled this to his partners, resulting in Police Officer Nertney and Police Officer Wittneben searching § 87(2)(b) vehicle (Allegations G and H: Abuse of Authority – Vehicle Search, Within NYPD Guidelines). No summons was issued, and the officers concluded their vehicle stop. Police Officer Nertney, Police Officer Wittneben, and Police Officer Medina did not provide their business cards to either § 87(2)(b) or § 87(2)(b) (Allegations I, J, K, and L: Abuse of Authority – Failure to Provide RTKA Card, Substantiated). § 87(2)(g), § 87(4-b)

Body-worn camera (BWC) footage was received from the BWCs of Police Officer Nertney (BR 01), Police Officer Wittneben (BR 02), and Police Officer Medina (BR 03). The footage is summarized in IA #23 (BR 04).

Findings and Recommendations

Allegation (A) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Ryan Nertney stopped the vehicle in which § 87(2)(b) and § 87(2)(b) were occupants.

Allegation (B) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Richard Wittneben stopped the vehicle in which § 87(2)(b) and § 87(2)(b) were occupants.

Allegation (C) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Nicholas Medina stopped the vehicle in which § 87(2)(b) and § 87(2)(b) were occupants.

§ 87(2)(b) was interviewed by the CCRB on February 20th, 2024 (BR 05). Police Officer Nertney (BR 06), Police Officer Wittneben (BR 07), and Police Officer Medina (BR 08) were interviewed on June 11th, 2024. Police Officer Nertney (BR 09) and Police Officer Medina (BR 10) were interviewed again on August 27th, 2024.

§ 87(2)(b) stated that he was driving, with his friend § 87(2)(b) was in the passenger seat, when officers signaled for § 87(2)(b) to pull over. § 87(2)(b) complied, and Police Officer Nertney, Police Officer Wittneben, and Police Officer Medina approached his vehicle. Police Officer Nertney explained to § 87(2)(b) that they stopped his vehicle due to the tinted windows. The windows were tinted, but § 87(2)(b) believed that they were within the legal limit.

Police Officer Nertney, Police Officer Wittneben, and Police Officer Medina all stated in their interviews that they observed § 87(2)(b) vehicle's window tints, which appeared to be beyond the legal limit, and this led them to stop § 87(2)(b) vehicle. Police Officer Nertney estimated the light transmittance percentage to be between 15-20%, while Police Officer Wittneben estimated the percentage as 15-25%. The officers did not use a tint meter to measure the tints, and they based these estimates on their observation of the vehicle.

Police Officer Nertney's BWC footage (BR 01) shows that, at timestamp 01:00, officers approach § 87(2)(b) vehicle. The vehicle's windows are rolled up and are clearly tinted, and there is limited visibility through the vehicle's windows. At timestamp 01:20, Police Officer Nertney explains to § 87(2)(b) that the reason his vehicle was stopped was because of the window tints.

New York State Vehicle and Traffic Law § 375 12-a (BR 11) states that "no person shall operate any motor vehicle upon any public highway, road, or street," in which any of the vehicle's windows are "treated with any material which has a light transmittance of less than seventy percent."

The courts have established that an officer's conclusions, based on their observation, that the window tint on a vehicle are darker than the legally allowed percentage is sufficient grounds to perform a vehicle stop, regardless of whether a tint test was performed. People v. Vonthaden, 13 Misc. 3d 408 (2006) (BR 12).

§ 87(2)(g)
BWC footage shows that § 87(2)(b) windows were heavily tinted, it is recommended that Allegations A, B, and C be closed as Within NYPD Guidelines.

Allegation (D) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Nicholas Medina questioned § 87(2)(b).

Allegation (F) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Nicholas Medina frisked § 87(2)(b).

§ 87(2)(b) stated that Police Officer Nertney asked him and § 87(2)(b) to exit the vehicle, and they stood at the back of the vehicle with Police Officer Medina and Police Officer Wittneben. It was a cold day, and § 87(2)(b) attempted to put his hands in his pockets. Police Officer Medina told § 87(2)(b) to keep his hands out of his pockets. § 87(2)(b) explained that he was cold, and Police Officer Medina told § 87(2)(b) that he could only put his hands in his pockets if he allowed Police Officer Medina to frisk him first. § 87(2)(b) agreed, and Police Officer Medina frisked § 87(2)(b) pants pockets and waistband. Police Officer Medina did not find anything, and § 87(2)(b) was allowed to put his hands in his pockets.

Police Officer Medina's BWC footage (BR 03) shows that, at timestamp 02:20, § 87(2)(b) exits the vehicle with his arms raised. Police Officer Medina asks, "You don't got anything on you?" § 87(2)(b) shakes his head and says, "Got some weed." Police Officer Medina then frisks § 87(2)(b) pockets. He feels an object in § 87(2)(b) pants and asks what it is. § 87(2)(b) states that it is a lighter. Police Officer Medina finishes his frisk, and § 87(2)(b) walks to the back of the vehicle with § 87(2)(b). At timestamp 02:45, § 87(2)(b) puts his hands in his sweatpants pockets. Police Officer Medina asks, "Do you mind just keeping your hands out of your pockets?" § 87(2)(b) removes his hands from his pockets. Police Officer Medina then states, "If I just feel it up, then you can go in there." § 87(2)(b) steps forward with his arms out, and Police Officer Medina frisks his pants pockets. Police Officer Medina feels something on § 87(2)(b) leg and asks what it is. § 87(2)(b) states that it is a prosthetic leg, and § 87(2)(b) lifts his pant leg to show Police Officer Medina. Police Officer Medina then finishes his frisk.

Police Officer Medina stated that, when he asked § 87(2)(b) as he exited the vehicle if he had “anything” on him, he was referencing weapons. Police Officer Medina asked this because § 87(2)(b) appeared nervous and had immediately put his hands up when he exited the vehicle. Police Officer Medina had no other indication that § 87(2)(b) was concealing a weapon. He did not observe anything on § 87(2)(b) person that resembled a weapon. Police Officer Medina then frisked § 87(2)(b) pockets, also because § 87(2)(b) appeared nervous and because he had put his hands up. Police Officer Medina did not feel any weapons in § 87(2)(b) pockets. Police Officer Medina then stood with § 87(2)(b) and § 87(2)(b) at the back of the vehicle. Police Officer Medina frisked § 87(2)(b) because § 87(2)(b) wanted to put his hands in his pockets, and Police Officer Medina wanted to make sure that § 87(2)(b) did not have anything in his pockets that posed a safety concern. Police Officer Medina did not observe anything in § 87(2)(b) pockets prior to frisking him, and he did not have any suspicion that § 87(2)(b) was concealing a weapon.

The courts have held that, during a lawfully conducted car stop, officers have the right to order the occupants of the vehicle to exit. Pennsylvania v. Mimms, 434 U.S. 106 (1977) (BR 13). However, per People v. Garcia, 20 N.Y.3d 317 (2012) (BR 15), the framework set forth in People v. De Bour, 40 N.Y.2d 210 (1976) (BR 14) for evaluating the constitutionality of police-initiated encounters with civilians extends to car stops; meaning that, when it comes to an officer questioning said occupants about suspected criminality, founded suspicion is required as the basis of said inquiry. This “common-law right to inquire is activated by a founded suspicion that criminality is afoot and permits a police officer to interfere with a citizen to the extent necessary to gain explanatory information.” Behavior that is “readily susceptible of an innocent interpretation” is not a sufficient basis. People v. Howard, 147 A.D.2d 177 (1989) (BR 17).

In People v. De Bour, 40 N.Y.2d 210 (1976) (BR 14), the court concluded that, in order to frisk an individual, officers must reasonably suspect that the individual is armed and dangerous. Further, in People v. Reid, 24 N.Y.3d 615 (2014) (BR 19) the court established that officers could not frisk or search individuals solely based on a VTL violation, and any search in this circumstance must be incident to a lawful arrest or a reasonable belief that the individual presented a danger to the officer.

It is therefore recommended that Allegations D and E be Substantiated.

§ 87(2)(g)
It is therefore recommended that Allegation F be Substantiated.

Allegation (G) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Ryan Nertney searched the vehicle in which § 87(2)(b) and § 87(2)(b) were occupants.
Allegation (H) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Richard Wittneben searched the vehicle in which § 87(2)(b) and § 87(2)(b) were occupants.

§ 87(2)(b) stated that, while he and § 87(2)(b) stood at the back of the vehicle, Police Officer Nertney approached and asked for permission to search § 87(2)(b) vehicle. § 87(2)(b) gave Police Officer Nertney permission to search because he did not want to give the officers a hard time. § 87(2)(b) could not see which parts of the vehicle Police Officer Nertney searched. After a few minutes, Police Officer Nertney returned and asked § 87(2)(b) to open the trunk. § 87(2)(b) complied, and Police Officer Wittneben searched the trunk.

Police Officer Medina stated that he first approached the passenger side of § 87(2)(b) vehicle and shone his flashlight in the backseat, where he noticed a capped but open bottle of liquor. The bottle was a long, clear cylinder with clear liquid inside, and it was positioned on its side underneath the front passenger seat. It was approximately half-full, and Police Officer Medina could see the bottom of the bottle sticking out. Police Officer Medina did not recall whether he observed a label on the bottle. Police Officer Medina approached the front passenger window. § 87(2)(b) rolled down the window, and Police Officer Medina observed a red Solo cup in the center console; Police Officer Medina did not recall the amount of liquid nor the color of the liquid in this cup. Police Officer Medina never smelled the scent of alcohol. Police Officer Medina believed this to be alcohol because it was in a red Solo cup. Police Officer Medina gestured to Police Officer Nertney and Police Officer Wittneben, who were standing on the other side of the vehicle, indicating to them that he'd observed an open container of alcohol in the vehicle.

Police Officer Nertney and Police Officer Wittneben both stated that, when they first approached the driver's side of § 87(2)(b) vehicle, Police Officer Medina stood on the other side of the vehicle and made a hand gesture indicating that the vehicle had an open container of alcohol inside. This gesture involved Police Officer Medina making a fist, sticking out his thumb and pinky finger, placing his thumb against his mouth, and tilting his hand upwards. Police Officer Nertney and Police Officer Wittneben understood this gesture to mean "open container" based on their previous experiences. Police Officer Nertney did not see the open container himself, but he trusted Police Officer Medina's assessment. Police Officer Nertney observed a marijuana cigarette in the center console, which was emitting smoke, and he smelled a slight odor of marijuana. Police Officer Nertney asked § 87(2)(b) if he could search the vehicle, but he stated to § 87(2)(b) (and to the CCRB during his interview) that the marijuana in the center console was not the basis for his search; instead, he requested to search based on Police Officer Medina's indication of an open container of alcohol. Before Police Officer Nertney could finish his question, § 87(2)(b) stated, "search, search, search." Police Officer Nertney interpreted this as voluntary consent to search the vehicle. However, Police Officer Nertney stated to § 87(2)(b) at the end of the search (and to the CCRB during his interview) that § 87(2)(b) had not been free to refuse his request for consent to search the car and that he would have searched § 87(2)(b) vehicle even if he had refused to provide consent. Police Officer Nertney searched the front seat first, where he found a red Solo cup in the center console. The cup was approximately half-full and contained a clear liquid with bubbles. Police Officer Nertney smelled alcohol from the cup. As he searched, the cup fell into the backseat, and liquid spilled on the floor. During his first CCRB interview, Police Officer Nertney stated that the only open container he found in the vehicle was the red Solo cup. However, during his second CCRB interview, Police Officer Nertney stated that, as he continued on to search the backseat, he observed a clear bottle of alcohol underneath the front passenger seat. He did not recall the shape or size of the bottle. Police Officer Nertney never removed the bottle from underneath the seat. Upon concluding his search of the front and back seats, Police Officer Nertney asked § 87(2)(b) to open the trunk, and Police Officer Wittneben searched the trunk.

Consent to Search Report # § 87(2)(b) (BR 31) was prepared by Police Officer Nertney in regard to this incident. It notes that consent was requested by Police Officer Nertney from a black male with a date of birth matching that of § 87(2)(b) but it does not specify whether the consented search was of a person, vehicle, home, or other property.

Police Officer Medina's BWC footage (BR 03) shows that, at timestamp 00:01, Police Officer

Medina shines his flashlight through the window of the backseat on the passenger side. The windows of § 87(2)(b) vehicle are heavily tinted, preventing a clear view of the backseat in the footage. Police Officer Medina approaches the front passenger window, and § 87(2)(b) rolls down the window. Police Officer Medina shines his flashlight through the front passenger window, and in the center console is a red Solo cup. At timestamp 01:05, Police Officer Medina gestures toward Police Officer Wittneben.

Police Officer Nertney's BWC footage (BR 01) shows that, at timestamp 02:15, Police Officer Medina is standing on the other side of the vehicle, and he lifts his hand toward his head, gesturing to Police Officer Nertney and Police Officer Wittneben. The vehicle obstructs the view of Police Officer Medina's hand, and the exact gesture he makes is not visible. At timestamp 03:10, as § 87(2)(b) exits the vehicle, the red Solo cup is clearly visible in the center console. At timestamp 03:30, Police Officer Nertney approaches § 87(2)(b) and tells him that he observed marijuana in § 87(2)(b) center console, but he is "not too worried about that." Police Officer Nertney asks § 87(2)(b) "Do you have anything else in the car that I need to search for?" § 87(2)(b) says no, and then § 87(2)(b) states, "Search it and let me go. I don't care." Police Officer Nertney then returns to § 87(2)(b) vehicle and enters through the driver's door. At timestamp 04:00, a red Solo cup is visible in the center console of § 87(2)(b) vehicle. Police Officer Nertney does not lift or inspect this cup in any way. Police Officer Nertney knocks over the cup into the backseat. The cup appears empty. At timestamp 04:20, Police Officer Nertney begins searching the backseat. There appears to be no spilled liquid on the floor from where the red solo cup was knocked over. There is no bottle of liquor visible underneath the front passenger seat. There is no object protruding from underneath the seat. After a few seconds of searching the backseat, Police Officer Nertney knocks over a roll of paper towels, which obstructs the view of the space underneath the front passenger seat. At timestamp 06:15, Police Officer Nertney searches the backseat again, from the other side of the vehicle. Police Officer Nertney moves the roll of paper towels slightly to the left, creating a clear view of the space underneath the front passenger seat. There is no bottle of liquor, nor is there any object, protruding from underneath the front passenger seat. At timestamp 07:15, after § 87(2)(b) and § 87(2)(b) have reentered the vehicle, Police Officer Nertney asks § 87(2)(b) to open the trunk so that Police Officer Wittneben can search. § 87(2)(b) does so. At timestamp 08:00, § 87(2)(b) asks why Police Officer Wittneben is searching the trunk. Police Officer Nertney responds, "You said yes." § 87(2)(b) then asks, "Why not? If I say no, y'all are going to do some other shit, so I might as well say yes." Police Officer Nertney responds, "You had the open alcohol anyway... If you said no, I still would search you, because you had the open alcohol. I didn't see it."

While the investigation cannot credit, based on the BWC footage, that Police Officer Medina observed an open container of alcohol in the vehicle, given the consistent account of the officers, the investigation credited that he made a motion that both Police Officer Nertney and Police Officer Wittneben reasonably interpreted as indicating that he had made such an observation. Likewise, while the BWC footage does not clearly show the marijuana in the center console of the vehicle, given that § 87(2)(b) acknowledged to Police Officer Medina that he had marijuana, and that § 87(2)(b) does not dispute it when Police Officer Nertney informs him that he had observed a marijuana "joint" in the vehicle, the investigation credits Police Officer Nertney's account of his observation of a marijuana cigarette in plain view in the vehicle.

Exceptions to the Fourth Amendment rule against warrantless searches of vehicles include the "automobile exception," which permits the warrantless search of a vehicle when there is probable cause to believe said vehicle contains evidence of a crime. People v. Galak, 81 N.Y.2d 463 (1993) (BR 32). As per People v. Hayden, 155 A.D.3d 1309 (2017) (BR 33), during a vehicle stop, an officer may seek consent to search the vehicle if the officer has founded suspicion of criminality. This consent must be "voluntarily given, and not the result of duress or coercion, express or implied, by the actions of the law enforcement authorities.” People v. Quagliata, 53 A.D.3d 670 (2008) (BR 34). Officers have founded suspicion of criminality “when there is some present indication of criminality based on observable conduct or reliable hearsay information.” Patrol Guide Procedure 212-11 (BR 18).

In People v Boykin, 188 A.D.3d 1244 (2020) (BR 37) the court determined that “officers’ observations of the brown liquid in the cups in the front console and the smell emanating from the vehicle gave them probable cause to suspect a violation of Vehicle and Traffic Law § 1227, which prohibits the possession of open containers containing alcohol in a vehicle located upon a public highway, and would have justified their entry into the vehicle to seize the cups of liquid and search for additional open containers.”

Per New York State Vehicle & Traffic Law §1227 (1) (BR 35), “the drinking of alcoholic beverages or consumption of cannabis, or the possession of an open container containing an alcoholic beverage, in a motor vehicle located upon the public highways or right-of-way public highway is prohibited. Any operator or passenger violating this section shall be guilty of a traffic infraction.”

§ 87(2)(g)

It is therefore recommended that Allegations G and H be closed as Within NYPD Guidelines.

Allegation (I) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Ryan Nertney failed to provide § 87(2)(b) with a business card.

Allegation (J) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Richard Wittneben failed to provide § 87(2)(b) with a business card.

Allegation (K) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Nicholas Medina failed to provide § 87(2)(b) with a business card.

Allegation (L) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Nicholas Medina failed to provide § 87(2)(b) with a business card.

It is undisputed that neither § 87(2)(b) nor § 87(2)(b) received any officer’s business card during this incident.

Police Officer Nertney, Police Officer Wittneben, and Police Officer Medina all stated that they did not provide their business cards because neither § 87(2)(b) nor § 87(2)(b) requested one. Police Officer Nertney and Police Officer Wittneben both believed that they were not required to provide their business card to § 87(2)(b) upon searching his vehicle because § 87(2)(b) consented to the search. Police Officer Medina believed that he was required to provide his business cards to both § 87(2)(b) and § 87(2)(b) upon frisking them, but he did not offer one because “it just slipped [his] mind.”

New York City Administrative Code § 14-174 (BR 20) requires that officers provide their business cards upon a frisk or search of a person, or the search of property, including vehicles, except when a summons is issued or an arrest is made. While there are exceptions to this requirement, no such exception exists for frisks and searches predicated on consent.
