Case Summary

On October 25, 2017, § 87(2)(b) made the following complaint by telephone to the CCRB (Board Review 01).

On October 25, 2017 at 1:50 p.m., § 87(2)(b) refused to open the door of her apartment at § 87(2)(b), in Queens, for PO Brett Strauss and PO Anthony Trombetta of the 102nd Precinct, who claimed that § 87(2)(b) would not allow her son, § 87(2)(b) - § 87(2)(b) to enter the apartment. Through the door, PO Strauss stated his name and that he would be § 87(2)(b)'s arresting officer. PO Strauss said, "Once you open this door, you're gonna get locked up" and stated he would report § 87(2)(b) to a sergeant and she would go to jail (Allegation A: Abuse of Authority, exonerated). PO Trombetta told § 87(2)(b) she would be arrested if she did not allow § 87(2)(b) into the apartment (Allegation B: Abuse of Authority, exonerated). PO Strauss told § 87(2)(b) that he would call the Administration for Children's Services (ACS) and that she would have an ACS case against her (Allegation C: Abuse of Authority, unsubstantiated). PO Strauss said, "If you don't open the door, we're going to kick the fucking door down" (Allegation D: Discourtesy, unsubstantiated). PO Strauss pounded at a circular section of § 87(2)(b)'s door, causing damage (Allegation E: Abuse of Authority, unsubstantiated). Police Officer Strauss pried away insulation from the door so that he could see inside the apartment (Allegation F: Abuse of Authority, substantiated).

§ 87(4-b), § 87(2)(g)

§ 87(2)(b) provided a cellphone video recording of a portion of the incident to the CCRB on October 30, 2017 (Board Review 02).

Findings and Recommendations

Allegation (A) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Brett Strauss threatened to arrest

§ 87(2)(b)

Allegation (B) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Anthony Trombetta threatened to arrest

§ 87(2)(b)

PO Strauss and PO Trombetta corroborated § 87(2)(b)'s claim that they told her she should be arrested.

§ 87(2)(b) stated that she was inside her apartment at § 87(2)(b), in Queens with her teenage daughters, § 87(2)(b) and § 87(2)(b) when her son, § 87(2)(b) abruptly entered the apartment, shoved a laundry cart inside, and exited (Board Review 03). § 87(2)(b) was § 87(2)(b)'s legal guardian and the primary leaseholder on the apartment. § 87(2)(b) was a secondary tenant who could be removed from the lease if § 87(2)(b) chose to do so. § 87(2)(b) left his key inside the apartment. § 87(2)(b) closed the door, which locked automatically behind him. § 87(2)(b) believed § 87(2)(b) had gone to work.

Ten minutes later, PO Strauss and PO Trombetta knocked at the door. PO Strauss said to open the door because she had illegally evicted her son. § 87(2)(b) refused to open the door because she felt threatened. PO Strauss stated his name through the door and said he would be § 87(2)(b)'s arresting officer. PO Strauss told § 87(2)(b) "I'm going to be the arresting officer. Once you open this door, you're gonna get locked up." PO Strauss also stated, "If you don't open the door, we're going to kick the fucking door down and when the door opens, I'm going to be the arresting officer." § 87(2)(b) asked why she would be arrested and stated that she had done nothing wrong. PO Strauss stated that § 87(2)(b) had an ID that showed he lived in the apartment. § 87(2)(b) confirmed that he lived in the apartment, but stated that she had not evicted § 87(2)(b). § 87(2)(b) slid her lease under the door in order to show that she was the primary lease holder and that § 87(2)(b)'s name was not on the lease. PO Strauss stated he would call a sergeant and § 87(2)(b) would go to jail.

PO Strauss and PO Trombetta were identified as the officers involved in this incident based upon Event # § 87(2)(b) which indicates that unit 102A-2 responded, to which PO Strauss and PO Trombetta were assigned to according to the roll call (Board Review 15 and 16). The physical descriptions of the officers that § 87(2)(b) provided in her interview at the CCRB largely corresponded to the officers' appearances.

On January 30, 2018, PO Strauss provided a statement at the CCRB. PO Strauss said that § 87(2)(b) § 87(2)(b) flagged him and PO Trombetta down from the sidewalk outside § 87(2)(b) (Board Review 04). § 87(2)(b) told the police officers that he had gone to do laundry and when he returned to the apartment, § 87(2)(b) had locked him out. § 87(2)(b) showed the police officers either his New York State (NYS) ID or his driver's license, which had the address of § 87(2)(b), written on it. § 87(2)(b) stated he had lived in the apartment for numerous years, though PO Strauss could not remember how long he said he had lived at the location. PO Strauss believed § 87(2)(b) had said that he lived in the apartment with his sister for approximately four years and that § 87(2)(b) had moved in with them two years ago. PO Strauss did not take additional steps to determine § 87(2)(b)'s residency. PO Strauss did not believe that § 87(2)(b) was § 87(2)(b)'s legal guardian because § 87(2)(b) appeared to be in his twenties.

When PO Strauss and PO Trombetta approached the door and § 87(2)(b) responded through the door, PO Strauss did not say his name and that he would be § 87(2)(b)'s arresting officer. Rather, he believed he probably tried to communicate that he and PO Trombetta were police officers and explained why § 87(2)(b) needed to open the door. PO Strauss stated through the door that § 87(2)(b) was not permitted to illegally evict § 87(2)(b). § 87(2)(b) responded that she had locked § 87(2)(b) out of the apartment due to his disrespectful attitude, to which PO Strauss responded that her behavior constituted an illegal eviction. PO Strauss told § 87(2)(b) to open the door numerous times, but she refused. PO Strauss told § 87(2)(b) that she had disobeyed a lawful order. While PO Strauss did not recall what was said exactly, he believed he would not have brought up the possibility of arrest until he had made numerous requests for § 87(2)(b) to open the door and provided her an explanation concerning illegal eviction. PO Strauss made multiple comments about the possibility that § 87(2)(b) might be arrested and told § 87(2)(b) that she would be arrested if the police officers made entry. He could not remember what he had said verbatim, but the situation was one in which § 87(2)(b) could have been lawfully arrested for illegal eviction.

and disobeying a lawful order. PO Strauss did not remember having said, “I’m going to be the arresting officer. Once you open this door you’re going to get locked up.” He did not recall having said, “If you don’t open the door we’re going to kick the fucking door down and when the door opens I’m going to be the arresting officer.” PO Strauss may have said, “Well, you’re going to jail.” These statements would not have been threats, but explanations of what could have been done if his lieutenant had responded to the incident properly. PO Strauss asked § 87(2)(b) if she had a lease. His question was intended namely as a means to engage § 87(2)(b) in conversation and to get her to open the door. The lease itself would not have changed the fact that § 87(2)(b) had committed an illegal eviction, as was already evident. § 87(2)(b) did not provide a lease in response to PO Strauss’ inquiry.

§ 87(2)(g). PO Trombetta confirmed that § 87(2)(b) provided the officers with a NYS driver’s license (Board Review 05). PO Trombetta stated that § 87(2)(b) s NYS driver’s license was “more than enough” to prove his residency. PO Trombetta could not recall if PO Strauss said his name and that he would be the arresting officer upon eliciting a response from § 87(2)(b). PO Strauss stated that they were police officers and were trying to gain entry. PO Strauss asked § 87(2)(b) to come outside of the apartment to discuss the matter, which § 87(2)(b) refused to do. PO Strauss stated that § 87(2)(b) had to either allow § 87(2)(b) into the apartment or come out of the apartment to have a discussion. PO Strauss did not say “If you don’t open the door, we’re going to kick the fucking door down and when the door opens, I’m going to be the arresting officer.” PO Strauss did not say, “Well, you’re going to jail.” PO Strauss might have said he was going to call a sergeant and that § 87(2)(b) would go to jail. PO Strauss did not say, “I’m going to be the arresting officer. Once you open this door, you’re gonna get locked up.” PO Strauss never asked § 87(2)(b) for a lease, as there was no reason to on this occasion. PO Trombetta also told § 87(2)(b) she would be subject to arrest (Board Review 06). He said this because an illegal eviction is an arrestable misdemeanor. PO Trombetta did not recall how many times he said that § 87(2)(b) would be subject to arrest, but he did so at least once. PO Trombetta did not recall if he explained to § 87(2)(b) why she could be arrested.

As per Patrol Guide Procedure 214-12, it is unlawful to evict or attempt to evict an occupant by the interruption or discontinuance of essential services including heat, electricity, and water (Board Review 07). A uniformed member of service is to effect an arrest when an individual who performs an illegal eviction refuses to permit the expelled occupant to re-enter the dwelling or prevents the occupant from re-entering through physical obstruction. These laws apply to any individual who has lawfully occupied a dwelling for 30 or more consecutive days. Unlawful eviction is a class “A” misdemeanor.

Allegation (C) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Brett Strauss threatened to notify the Administration for Children's Services.

§ 87(2)(g)

§ 87(2)(b) stated that, after one occasion in which PO Strauss told her she would be jailed, he stated, “I’m calling ACS and you’re gonna have an ACS case (Board Review 03).” § 87(2)(b) did not know what she had done that would cause PO Strauss to notify ACS, and was confused as to what he referred. § 87(2)(b) stated that at least one of her daughters was a minor. She did not know if the comment was in reference to § 87(2)(b) or to her teenage daughters inside the apartment.

In his testimony to the CCRB, PO Strauss stated that while he spoke to § 87(2)(b) through the door, he heard a second voice issue from inside the apartment (Board Review 04). The voice sounded like that of a young female whom he believed to be § 87(2)(b)’s daughter. PO Strauss initially stated that he did not recall if ACS was discussed at all during the incident, but later said it was not discussed at all. PO Strauss did not specifically remember having said, “I’m calling ACS and you’re going to have an ACS case,” but conceded that the comment might have been said. Had ACS been brought up, it would have been because, if § 87(2)(b) were arrested for illegal eviction, the child would have been left in the apartment without a guardian. In such a situation, PO Strauss would have called ACS.

PO Trombetta also did not recall that PO Strauss made any comments about ACS, but stated that he was on the telephone with Lieutenant Gulinelli in the stairwell down the hall for part of PO Strauss’ interaction with § 87(2)(b) (Board Review 05). Nonetheless, PO Trombetta stated that PO Strauss did not say “I’m calling ACS and you’re gonna have an ACS case.” ACS was never mentioned because there was no reason for PO Strauss to believe ACS should be consulted given the situation.

According to Patrol Guide Procedure 215-06, when a child under eighteen is left uncared for due to a guardian’s arrest, a police officer must notify the Administration of Children’s Services (Board Review 17).

§ 87(2)(g)

§ 87(2)(g) It is therefore recommended that Allegation C be closed as exonerated.

Allegation (D) Discourtesy: Police Officer Brett Strauss spoke discourteously to § 87(2)(b)

§ 87(2)(g)

§ 87(2)(b) alleged that PO Strauss stated through her door, “If you don’t open the door, we’re going to kick the fucking door down (Board Review 03).” § 87(2)(b) stated that PO Strauss yelled throughout the incident and sounded agitated. § 87(2)(b) was also frustrated and angry, but she did not yell or call the officers names.

PO Strauss did not recall if he said, “If you don’t open the door, we’re going to kick the fucking door down,” though he proceeded to explain that as a police officer, one tries different tactics, which range from kindness to intimidation, in order to gain compliance from an individual (Board Review 04). PO Strauss did not recall whether or not he used any profanity during the interaction. He did not recall a particular context in which he might have used profanity. His overall demeanor was calm, while § 87(2)(b) was angry, loud, and vocal. PO Strauss believed she may have cursed at him.

PO Trombetta stated that PO Strauss did not say, “If you don’t open the door, we’re going to kick the fucking door down (Board Review 05).” Throughout the interaction, § 87(2)(b)’s demeanor was hostile, while PO Trombetta and PO Strauss remained calm.

2018-03-08_19-09-00.mp4

§ 87(2)(b) recorded a cellphone video during the incident that lasts 53 seconds and is largely framed around the door’s peephole, looking outward into the hallway where an officer appears to stand (Board Review 02). The video transcription can be found at Board Review 08. The officer was identified by PO Trombetta as PO Strauss, while PO Strauss said it was not clear who the individual was. Nonetheless, PO Strauss’ subsequent language as he spoke about the video indicated that he was the individual depicted, as when, for example, he spoke about his voice or the object in his hand. The recording was taken after the alleged discourteous statement was said, based upon the chronology provided by § 87(2)(b) but nonetheless provides an indication as to PO Strauss’ demeanor. In the clip above (Board Review 20), PO Strauss’ voice sounds calm in that it is level and at a controlled volume. At 23 seconds into the clip, PO Strauss refers to § 87(2)(b) as “Ma’am.” His body language is contained and appears calm, as when he appears to use his right elbow to lean against a wall at 30 seconds into the video.

§ 87(2)(g)

Therefore, it is recommended that Allegation D be closed as unsubstantiated.

Allegation (E) Abuse of Authority: Police Officer Brett Strauss damaged § 87(2)(b)'s property.

§ 87(2)(g)

§ 87(2)(b) stated by telephone that the apartment doors in her building had a circular cut-out above the handle into which residents may choose to install a deadbolt at their own expense (Board Review 09). The doors came equipped with a metal filler when residents moved in, and some tenants, including § 87(2)(b) chose to leave the filler installed rather than purchase a deadbolt. The filler consisted of two metal circular discs connected by screws, so that its shape when assembled resembled that of a small barbell. The door consisted of a steel shell with a hollow interior filled with cotton insulation, such that one of the metal discs of the filler device fit into the cut-out on the front of the door and the other disk fit into the back side of the door. § 87(2)(b) did not know how the device attached to the door, but stated that it fit tightly into the opening, such that if one punched the circular filler, the device would not move. One would have to bang at it with a heavy object in order to remove it. Insulation surrounded the screws connecting the two discs when the filler device was installed. Soon after § 87(2)(b) began to converse with the officers, § 87(2)(b) heard the sound of kicks at her door. When § 87(2)(b) told the officers to stop banging on her door, PO Strauss stated that they had not banged at the door but that § 87(2)(b) has kicked at the door. Towards the end of the verbal exchange with PO Strauss and PO Trombetta through the door, § 87(2)(b) heard a loud pounding noise near the door filler (Board Review 03). Through the peephole, she saw that PO Strauss pounded at repeated intervals with his baton. PO Strauss first pounded in the outer disc, and then knocked back the disc on the inside of the door by jamming his baton through the insulation to the back of the door. After five to seven minutes of pounding at regular intervals, the filler device fell to the ground inside the apartment. The metal piece was somewhat bent, and had circular indentations where PO Strauss had hit it with his baton.

In PO Strauss' account of events, he stated that § 87(2)(b) kicked at the door forcefully and loudly numerous times in order to prompt § 87(2)(b) to engage with the officers (Board Review 04). As he did so, a part of the door fell off so as to create an opening that was a few inches by a few inches in size. PO Strauss did not know exactly which part of the door was damaged, but thought perhaps it was the doorbell.

PO Trombetta also stated that § 87(2)(b) kicked the door forcefully multiple times in order to engage § 87(2)(b) in conversation with the police officers, producing loud "banging" noises (Board Review 05). § 87(2)(b) kicked the door on the side opposite the hinges, from the bottom to the middle of the door vertically. PO Trombetta believed he did so for approximately one minute. PO Trombetta did not at first recall if the door was damaged or broken prior to his arrival. There was no significant damage to the door or its frame, though there may have been some damage that was not visible. PO Trombetta did not recall that PO Strauss used a baton during the incident.

§ 87(2)(b) provided a photograph that allegedly depicted her apartment door from the outside, taken at an unspecified time and date after the incident (Board Review 10). The image shows a circular opening that extends through the door and is approximately one and a half feet above the top of the door handle. The opening is approximately three inches in diameter. The right side of the opening makes evident that the door is made of a metal shell. Bits of insulation are visible along of left side of the orifice. PO Strauss stated that when he left the building, the opening was covered entirely with insulation, which in this photograph had been pushed aside. When PO Trombetta was shown the photograph, he recalled that there was a hole in the door where the deadbolt would normally have been (Board Review 05). He did not remember if the hole was already there when he and PO Strauss arrived at the scene or if it was created while they were there. PO Trombetta did not remember a piece of the door falling off in his presence.

§ 87(2)(b) provided another photograph, also taken at an unspecified time and date after the incident, that allegedly depicts damage to the outside of the door where § 87(2)(b) kicked at the door (Board Review 11). The photograph depicts a gap between the bottom of the door and the doorjamb on the side opposite the hinges at the bottom of the door. The gap appears to be less than half an inch, though the photograph contains few indicators as to its scale. Neither PO Strauss nor PO Trombetta recalled whether or not the gap was already there when they arrived at the apartment. PO Trombetta confirmed that that was the area of the door that § 87(2)(b) had kicked.

§ 87(2)(g)
Therefore, it is recommended that Allegation D be closed as unsubstantiated.

Allegation (F) Discourtesy: Police Officer Brett Strauss searched § 87(2)(b), in Queens.

It is undisputed that PO Strauss attempted to search § 87(2)(b), in Queens by prying through the insulation within the door in order to see inside § 87(2)(b)'s apartment.

§ 87(2)(b) stated that once the door filler had been pushed out, the insulation within the door still covered the hole so that she could not see through the opening (Board Review 03). PO Strauss tried to pry through the now-exposed insulation with a black stick, identified by the investigation as his service baton. § 87(2)(b) told her daughter to rest her Xbox video game console atop the door handle in order to block the officer's entry. The baton hit against the Xbox. § 87(2)(b) told PO Strauss that he was being recorded, at which point he retracted the baton and placed it down at the left side of his waist.

In PO Strauss' statement, he confirmed that he placed his baton into the hole in the door in order to push aside the insulation within it. The sole reason he did so was to see inside the apartment for his safety and the safety of everyone around (Board Review 04). He needed to ensure that § 87(2)(b) did not have a gun on her and that there were no other unforeseen hazards inside. However, PO Strauss was unable to move the insulation aside. He did not recall that his baton hit against an object that might have been used to block its entry. PO Trombetta called Lieutenant Michael Gulinello, whom PO Strauss expected to arrange for an apartment entry. Lieutenant Gulinello instead told PO Trombetta to file a Domestic Incident Report and proceed to their next job.

PO Trombetta stated that while § 87(2)(b)'s demeanor was hostile throughout the interaction, she did not seem to represent a threat to himself or PO Strauss (Board Review 05). He confirmed that PO Strauss tried to look through the insulation with his baton, as it would have been unsafe to use his hand. However, he was unable to see inside. PO Strauss told PO Trombetta that it was dark inside. PO Trombetta did not believe the occupants tried to block the hole from the inside.

In the video clip previously discussed in reference to Allegation E, recorded by § 87(2)(b), the peephole of the door is framed in close-up (Board Review 02). An officer can be seen through it, standing directly outside in the hallway. § 87(2)(b) can be heard off-screen conversing through the door with PO Strauss, while § 87(2)(b) occasionally makes quieter comments. Five clanks can be heard at roughly regular intervals between 3 and 12 seconds into the video clip, as § 87(2)(b) states, "Let me call my union rep and tell them the cops is trying to bang down my door." PO Strauss lifts a baton into the air at 12 seconds into the video clip. PO Strauss states, "I'm just trying to see what's on the other side of the door for my safety." At 19 seconds into the recording, PO Strauss places the baton into his holster.

When PO Strauss viewed this recording he stated that the repetitious, non-verbal noises sounded as if they came from inside the apartment and that he was not near the door when they could be heard. In response to the recording, he said that he tried to see what was on the other side of the door for his safety and that he used his baton to do so. PO Trombetta was unable to identify what produced the sounds, but thought that PO Strauss could have been knocking on the door. He stated he did not see a baton or similar object in the video clip. When asked to explain the movement of the officer's arms, whom PO Trombetta identified as PO Strauss, he could not tell what PO Strauss was doing at that time and stated that he might have been on the telephone with Lieutenant Gulinello and stepped aside.

The video clip is, in itself, ambiguous as to the actions that occur within its running time. The door largely obstructs the actions performed by PO Strauss so that only his upper body is visible through a peephole that distorts his image. The sound, aside from some of what PO Strauss says, is produced off-screen and cannot be attributed to any specific actions seen onscreen. The clip shows that PO Strauss had his baton out of his belt holster, that a repetitive non-verbal noise was produced during this time, and that, concurrent with these sounds, § 87(2)(b) stated to PO Strauss that he was trying to bang down her door. PO Strauss responded that he wanted to see through the door for his safety, in response to § 87(2)(b)'s statement. § 87(2)(g)

§ 87(2)(b). There is no indication within the recording of when in the course of the interaction the video was recorded in order to clarify which alleged actions it peripherally depicts.

However, just as § 87(2)(b) stated in her account of the moment when PO Strauss put his baton through the insulation, she can be heard at 15 seconds into the video clip telling PO Strauss that she is recording. PO Strauss subsequently moves back and places his baton in his belt holster on his left side. § 87(2)(g)

§ 87(2)(g)

In People v. Mercado, 68 N.Y.2d 874 (1986), the Court of Appeals of New York wrote that “once it is resolved that the particular locale is one in which there is a cognizable expectation of privacy, the invasion of that privacy interest—including a visual one—will be a search subject to constitutional strictures” (Board Review 12). The Fourth Amendment of the Constitution ensures the basic right to be free from unreasonable searches and requires that warrants, both particular and supported by probable cause, be obtained in order to conduct a search. In People v. Hodge, 44 N.Y.2d 553 (1978), the Court of Appeals wrote that when there are not exigencies that make a search without a warrant imperative, “all warrantless searches presumptively are unreasonable per se” (Board Review 17).
